

Private Howard Hulan (Regimental Number 1568) is buried in Ayr Cemetery, Ayrshire: Grave reference G.3.4.

His occupation prior to military service recorded as that of a telegraph operator and earning thirty-six dollars per month, Howard Hulan was a recruit of the Fifth Draft. He presented himself for medical examination at the Church Lads Brigade Armoury in St. John's, capital city of the Dominion of Newfoundland, on May 27, 1915. It was a procedure which was to pronounce him as being...Fit for Foreign Service.

(continued)

On the morrow, May 28, Howard Hulan returned to the CLB Armoury on Harvey Road, on this second occasion to enlist. He was thereupon engaged at the private soldier's daily rate of a single dollar to which was to be added a ten-cent per diem field allowance.

Later, on that same May 28, he swore the oath of allegiance, usually the final formality of enlistment, to George V, whereupon, at that moment, Howard Hulan became...a soldier of the King.

There thereupon followed a lengthy waiting period of three weeks plus two days before Private Hulan, Regimental Number 1568, was to embark onto His Majesty's Transport Calgarian on June 20 in St. John's Harbour and sail (*almost) directly to the United Kingdom. He was one of the two-hundred forty-two personnel of 'F' Company and eighty-five naval reservists to take passage on that day.

(Right above: Naval reservists from Newfoundland, during the early days of the Great War, before their departure for the United Kingdom - from The War Illustrated)

Where Private Hulan was to spend the interim between his attestation and his departure on...*overseas service...*is not clear – and is not documented among his papers.

It may be that he returned temporarily to work and perhaps not unlikely that he was to spend at least some of that time at his home at Robinson's Station in the Newfoundland west coast District of St. Georges - but this of course is only speculation.

(Right above: The photograph of Newfoundland military personnel in tenders on their way to board 'Calgarian' is from the Provincial Archives. 'Calgarian' was not a requisitioned troop transport but in September of 1914 had been taken over by the British government to serve as an armed merchant-cruiser. She did, however, as on this occasion, at times carry troops and civilian passengers across the Atlantic. She was later torpedoed and sunk by U-19 off the north of Ireland on March 1, 1918.)

Apparently the ship took nineteen days to make what was usually the journey of about a week. Not only was Calgarian escorting three submarines, but she sailed by way of the Portuguese Azores and then Gibraltar – some of the Newfoundlanders apparently even having the time to cross the straits to spend a few hours in North Africa. She reached Liverpool on July 9.*

(Right above: The British Crown Colony of Gibraltar in pre-Great War days: The Spanish mainland is in the background beyond the harbour and Royal Navy dockyard. – from a vintage postcard)

On the day after its arrival in the United Kingdom, 'F' Company travelled from Liverpool by train to Hawick from where the detachment marched and then reported...to duty...at Stobs Camp on the evening of July 10. It was an important moment: the Newfoundland Regiment, as of that day counting fifteen hundred personnel*, was now at establishment strength and could be posted on...active service.

A number sufficient to furnish four 'fighting' companies, two re-enforcement companies and a headquarters staff.*

(Right above: The men of the Regiment await their new Lee-Enfield rifles. – original photograph from the Provincial Archives)

* * * * *

Almost nine months before that June 20 of 1915, in the late summer and early autumn of 1914, the newly-formed Newfoundland Regiment's first recruits had undergone a period of training of five weeks on the shores of Quidi Vidi Lake in the east end of St. John's and elsewhere in the city, they to become 'A' and 'B' Companies.

During that same period the various authorities had also been preparing for the Regiment's transfer overseas.

(Right above: The image of 'Florizel' at anchor in the harbour at St. John's is by courtesy of Admiralty House Museum.)

This first Newfoundland contingent was to embark on October 3, in some cases only days after a recruit's enlistment and/ or attestation. To become known to history as the First Five Hundred and also as the Blue Puttees, on that day they had boarded the Bowring Brothers' vessel Florizel awaiting in St. John's Harbour.

The ship had sailed for the United Kingdom on the morrow, October 4, 1914, to its rendezvous with the convoy carrying the 1st Canadian Division overseas, off the south coast of the Island.

(Right: Fort George, constructed in the latter half of the eighteenth century, still serves the British Army to this day. – photograph from 2011)

Once having disembarked in the United Kingdom this first Newfoundland contingent was to train in three venues during the late autumn of 1914 and then the winter of 1914-1915: firstly in southern England on the Salisbury Plain; then in Scotland at Fort George – on the Moray Firth close to Inverness; and lastly at Edinburgh Castle – where it was to provide the first garrison from outside the British Isles.

Only days after 'A' and 'B' Companies had taken up their posting there, on February 16 of 1915, 'C' Company – the first re-enforcements for the original contingent - would arrive directly – through Liverpool of course - from Newfoundland. On the final day of the month of March it had been the turn of 'D' Company to arrive – they via Halifax as well as Liverpool – to report...to duty...at Edinburgh, and then 'E' Company five weeks less a day later again, on May 4*.

These five Companies, while a contingent of the Newfoundland Regiment, was not yet a battalion and would not be so for a further five months – as will be seen below.*

(Right above: The venerable bastion of Edinburgh Castle dominates the Scottish capital from its hill in the centre of the city. – photograph from 2011)

Seven days after the arrival of 'E' Company in the Scottish capital, on May 11 the entire Newfoundland contingent was ordered elsewhere. On that day, seven weeks into spring – although in Scotland there was apparently still snow - the unit was dispatched to Stobs Camp, all under canvas and south-eastwards of Edinburgh, close to the town of Hawick.

(Right: The Newfoundland Regiment marches past on the training ground at Stobs Camp and is presented with its Colours on June 10, 1915. – by courtesy of Reverend Wilson Tibbo and of Mrs. Lillian Tibbo)

Two months less a day later, on July 10, 'F' Company marched into Stobs Camp.

* * * * *

From Stobs Camp, some three weeks after the arrival of 'F' Company, in early August 'A', 'B', 'C' and 'D', the four senior Companies, having now become the 1st Battalion of the Newfoundland Regiment, were transferred to Aldershot Camp in southern England. There they were to undergo final preparations – and a royal inspection – before departing to the Middle East and to the fighting on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

(Right: George V, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India – the photograph is from Bain News Services via the Wikipedia web-site.)

The later arrivals to the United Kingdom, 'E' and 'F' Companies, were to be posted to the new Regimental Depot and were eventually to form the nucleus of the soon to be formed 2nd (Reserve) Battalion of the Newfoundland Regiment.

The Depot was now to become Private Hulan's home for the nine months which were to follow, the last of his short life.

(continued)

At the end of this summer of 1915, the once-Royal Borough of Ayr on Scotland's west coast was to begin to serve as the overseas base for what was to become the 2nd (Reserve) Battalion of the Newfoundland Regiment from where – as of November of 1915 and up until January of 1918 - reinforcement drafts from home were to be despatched to bolster the 1st Battalion's numbers, at first to the Middle East and then later to the Western Front.

(Right above: An aerial view of Ayr, likely from the period between the Wars: Newton-on Ayr, where were quartered the 'other ranks', is to the left of the River Ayr and the Royal Borough, where were housed the officers, is to the right. – by courtesy of the Carnegie Library at Ayr)

(Right: The High Street in Ayr as shown on a postcard of the time, the imposing Wallace Tower – it stands to this day (2017) - dominating the scene – by courtesy of Reverend Wilson Tibbo and Mrs Lillian Tibbo.

It was on December 31, the last day of the year 1915, that Private Hulan was admitted into Crofthead Hospital at Ayr and there diagnosed as suffering from both measles and pneumonia. Some six weeks later, on February 15, he was transferred to Carrick House (Red Cross) Auxiliary Hospital, also in Ayr; his condition had degenerated by this time and the diagnosis was now even more serious: pulmonary tuberculosis.

Ayr 7/4/16: Recommended by the Standing Medical Board for discharge as permanently unfit for any Military Service

The son of Richard Hulan (also found as *Huelin), fisherman, and Jane Hulan (née Harvey(?) and see  below) – to whom he had allotted a daily allowance of sixty cents from his pay - of Robinson's Station in the District of St. George's, he was reported as having...died of sickness...in Carrick House Auxiliary Hospital on May 2, 1916.

Richard Henry Huelin had married Matilda Ellen Legge on June 6, 1891. However, after only some five months, on November 19 of the same year, Matilda died as the result of an accident.*

Howard Hulan had enlisted at a declared eighteen years of age (see  below).

(Right above: The once-Carrick House Hospital on Carrick Road in Ayr is today a hotel and restaurant. – photograph from 2013)

(continued)

They are likely to have been the Richard Henry Huelin and Catherine Jane Huelin of Robinsons (Black Duck) listed in the 1921 census, then Howard Edgar (later Private) was born on August 31, 1897. He was the oldest sibling to Mary-Matilda, Arnold, Una, Myrtle, Hazel, Henry-Lloyd, Douglas, Ronald (or Roland) and Geraldine.

By 1930 the parents and the youngest children had moved to and were living in the area of Queen's, New York.

(Right: The image of Private Hulan (seated) and an unidentified comrade-in-arms is from the Grand Banks Genealogy web-site.)

Private Hulan (Huelin) was entitled to the British War Medal for his overseas service.

The above dossier has been researched, compiled and produced by Alistair Rice. Please email any suggested amendments or content revisions if desired to criceadam@yahoo.ca. Last updated – February 5, 2023.