

Private Walter Leonard Murphy (Regimental Number 407) lies in East Mudros Military Cemetery on the island of Lemnos – Grave reference III. A. 9.

His occupation prior to military service recorded as that of a clerk and news-agent with the Reid Nfld. Company, and earning a weekly wage of seven dollars, Walter Murphy presented himself at the Church Lads Brigade Armoury on Harvey Road in St. John's, capital city of the Dominion of Newfoundland, on September 4 of 1914 – just four weeks and three days after the Declaration of War – for a medical examination. It was an exercise which was to pronounce him as...Fit for Foreign Service.

Four days following that medical examination, on September 8, Walter Murphy returned to the C.L.B. Armoury, on this second occasion for enlistment, whereupon he was engaged at the private soldier's daily rate of a single dollar plus a ten-cent per diem Field Allowance. A recruit of the First Draft, he was likely now ordered to the tented area by that time established on the shores of Quidi Vidi Lake in the East End of St. John's where a four-five week course of training was already under way.

The regimental authorities were also busy by now, preparing for the transport of this, the first body of volunteers, to overseas - and later to active – service.

At the beginning of the month of October a large number of the new recruits underwent attestation; Private Murphy was one of that number, taking his oath of allegiance on the first day of October.

Two days later, after the Newfoundland contingent – it was not as yet a battalion – of ‘A’ and ‘B’ Companies had paraded through the city, it embarked onto the Bowring Brothers’ vessel Florizel which was awaiting in St. John’s Harbour.

Private Murphy and his comrades-in-arms of the First Five Hundred – also to be known to history as the Blue Puttees – were now to sit on board ship for the best part of a day as it was not to be until the morrow that Florizel would sail to the south coast of the Island and to its rendezvous with the convoy carrying the Canadian Division to the United Kingdom.

In the United Kingdom this first Newfoundland contingent was to train in three venues during the late autumn of 1914 and then the winter of 1914-1915: firstly in southern England on the Salisbury Plain; then in Scotland at Fort George – on the Moray Firth close to Inverness; and lastly at Edinburgh Castle where the unit was to provide the first garrison from outside the British Isles.

Some three months later, on May 11, and some seven weeks into spring – although in Scotland there was apparently still snow - the entire Newfoundland unit – by now ‘A’ and ‘B’ Companies re-enforced by ‘C’, ‘D’, and ‘E’ - was ordered moved from the Scottish capital to Stobs Camp, all under canvas and south-eastwards of Edinburgh, in the vicinity of the town of Hawick.

It was to be at Stobs Camp that the Newfoundland contingent received the re-enforcements from home – ‘F’ Company which arrived on July 10, 1915 - that would bring its numbers up to that of British Army establishment battalion strength*. The now-formed 1st Battalion of the Newfoundland Regiment was thus rendered ready to be ordered on ‘active service’.

*The number was about fifteen hundred, sufficient to provide four ‘fighting’ companies, two re-enforcement companies and a headquarters staff.

At the beginning of that August of 1915, the four senior Companies, ‘A’, ‘B’, ‘C’ and ‘D’ – Private Murphy among their ranks - were then sent south from Stobs Camp to undergo a final two weeks of training, as well as an inspection by the King, at Aldershot.

This force, now designated as the 1st Battalion of the Newfoundland Regiment, was thereupon attached to the 88th Brigade of the 29th Division of the (British) Mediterranean Expeditionary Force.

Meanwhile the two junior companies, the later-arrived ‘E’ and the aforementioned last-arrived ‘F’, were ordered transferred to Scotland’s west coast, to Ayr, there to provide the nucleus of the newly-forming 2nd (Reserve) Battalion.

It was also during this period while at Aldershot that on August 13 Private Murphy was prevailed upon to re-enlist, on this occasion for the duration of the war.*.

*At the outset of the War, perhaps because it was felt by the authorities that it would be a conflict of short duration, the recruits enlisted for a single year. As the War progressed, however, this was likely to cause problems and the men were encouraged to re-enlist.

While ‘E’ and ‘F’ Companies were beginning their posting to the Regimental Depot at Ayr, on August 20 of 1915 the 1st Battalion embarked in the Royal Navy Harbour of Plymouth-Devonport onto the requisitioned passenger-liner Megantic for passage to the Middle East and to the fighting against the Turks.

There, a month later – having spent some two weeks billeted in British barracks in the vicinity of the Egyptian capital, Cairo - on September 20, the 1st Battalion was to land at Suvla Bay on the Gallipoli Peninsula.

Only just a week after having set foot on the sand and stone of Kangaroo Beach – on September 27 – Private Murphy was evacuated from Suvla Bay to Mudros on the Greek island of Lemnos, suffering from dysentery and there was admitted into the 1st Australian Stationary Hospital. The medical staff thereupon reported him as being dangerously ill.

Born in Harbour Grace, the son of John Joseph Murphy, a checker with the Reid Nfld. Company, and of Alice Murphy (née Hamilton)* of 20, Buchanan Street in St. John's, he was also brother to May-Clare, John-Joseph, Peter, Elizabeth, Thomas, Alice-Carnell, Ellen and to Ida-Josephine.

The couple married on January 31, 1892.*

Private Murphy of 'B' Company was reported as having died of sickness two days after his admission, in the 1st Australian Stationary Hospital on September 29, 1915.

Walter Leonard Murphy had enlisted at a declared nineteen years of age: date of birth in Harbour Grace, Newfoundland, April 6, 1896 (from the Newfoundland Birth Register).
